INVESTMENT COMMENTARY

Following a strong rally in global equity markets earlier this year, the ascent stalled in the month as interest rates, in particular in the US, are expected to remain higher for longer. In the meantime, the valuation gap between small and mid-cap stocks and large and mega caps remains at record highs and provides global investors with a huge mean-reversion opportunity.

SKAGEN Focus recently won two Lipper Awards in Germany and the Nordics for best small and mid-cap fund over 5 years. This demonstrates how parting from the crowd can produce lucrative results over time.

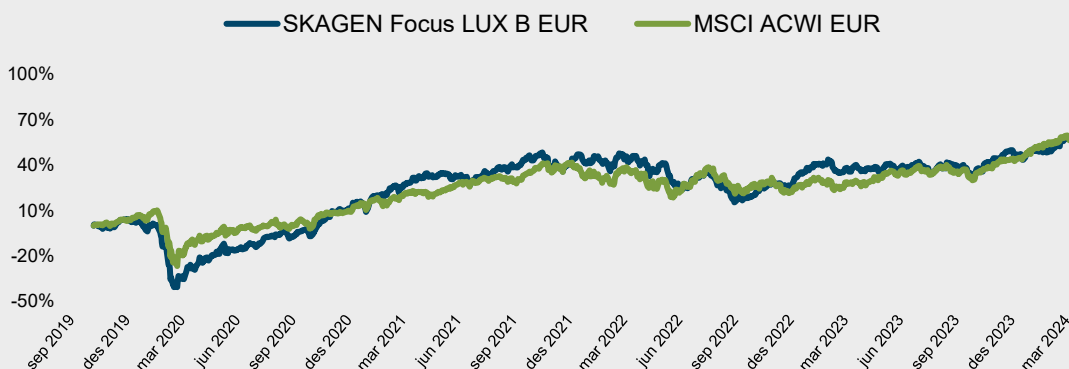

The fund performed roughly in line with global equity markets in April and is in line with the global small and mid-cap index so far this year but lagging its benchmark index. The strongest performing names could be found in the commodities sector – in gold and silver mining in particular – as both Fortuna Silver and Aya Gold and Silver rallied sharply along with higher commodity prices. Our Spanish copper producer Atalaya Mining was also higher. The company moved its listing to London in April, which draws attention to this below-the-radar and substantially undervalued equity.

On the weaker side of the portfolio were the South Korean automotive producer Hyundai Mobis and Canadian lumber producers Canfor and Interfor as the normalisation of lumber prices remains elusive.

Following a strong re-rating, the Italian truck-producer Iveco left the fund at price target. We have initiated a new position in the below-the-radar specialty insurer Old Republic which we believe is trading at an unwarranted discount to fair value and peers.
